

NEWS HOME

AUDIO [4:38]

Commonwealth Bank in damage control after allegations it breached anti-money laundering laws

STEPHEN SMILEYUPDATED FRI 4 AUG 2017, 3:40 PM AEST

Members of the board of the Commonwealth Bank are in damage control this lunchtime as the company pledges to fight allegations it breached anti-money laundering laws. The bank faces potential fines of up to one-trillion dollars if the almost 54,000 alleged breaches are proven. Financial security analysts are baffled by the size and scale of the charges. Meanwhile there's concern too that the bank's customers and shareholders could wear some of the cost of any future fine.

TRANSCRIPT

Members of the board of the Commonwealth Bank are in damage control this lunchtime as the company pledges to fight allegations it breached anti-money laundering laws.

The bank faces potential fines of up to one-trillion dollars if the almost 54,000 alleged breaches are proven.

Financial security analysts are baffled by the size and scale of the charges.

Meanwhile there's concern too that the bank's customers and shareholders could wear some of the cost of any future fine.

Featured:

Gavin Durban, former senior executive, Australian Transactions Reports and Analysis Centre

Kevin Davis, Professor of Finance, University of Melbourne

Anthony Quinn, CEO, Arctic Intelligence

THE WORLD TODAY

POSTED FRI 4 AUG 2017, 1:52 PM AEST

SHARE

MORE FROM ABC NEWS

Home	Just In
Australia	World
Analysis & Opinion	Business
Sport	Science
Arts	Live Streams
Video	Photos
Entertainment	Upload
Subscribe	Rural
More >

Top of page

Change to standard view

ABC News	Just In
Australia	World
Business	Entertainment
Sport	Analysis & Opinion
Weather	Topics
Archive	Corrections & Clarifications